Figure 1. A schematic diagram of the experimental design. The diagram shows a sequence of events: a subject is presented with a stimulus (a word or picture), then a response is recorded (a button press or verbal response), and finally a feedback is provided (a tone or visual feedback). The sequence is repeated for multiple trials, with the stimulus and response being varied across trials. The feedback is provided immediately after the response. The diagram also shows the timing of the events, with the stimulus being presented for a fixed duration, followed by a response period, and then a feedback period. The sequence is repeated for multiple trials, with the stimulus and response being varied across trials. The feedback is provided immediately after the response.
