

Advantages for Users/Programs

Users: Many features, such as protected sharing, allow various applications to work together transparently without the low efficiency that can result before the individual facilities. A single interface is sufficient to protect their code, including all the most sensitive code, but still allowing access to various resources in their code. The advantages of applications are available, including virtual shared resources, but without the overhead of a system of applications, such as a shared library.

Programs: Users can share applications, such as the same application, or other, without the need for a separate library. This means that the same application can be shared by many, as it is not shared by a single application, but by a shared library.
