An Historical and Visual Rhetorical Analysis of Superman Comic Books, 1938-1945 David J. Cross, 2011 ABSTRACT Prior and during World War II comic books were among America's largest mass media One of the most popular if not the most popular character to emerge from this time period was Superman The Man of Tomorrow Almost immediately after the character's first appearance in 1938 the country's newsstands were filled with brightly colored imitations At the same time that the country's comic book industry came into being the nation was undergoing a host of changes and controversy The Great Depression had wrecked the country and President Franklin Roosevelt's New Deal attempted to right the economic downturn. But as the country dealt with the lack of economic growth it also came to question its role in foreign affairs. The outbreak of conflict in Europe led to a fight at home between isolationists and interventionists and whether the country should broach supporting the Allied Forces. After Pearl Harbor the nation entered the European conflict with zeal as did the comic book industry. This thesis is an historical and visual rhetorical analysis of Superman comic books from 1938 to 1945. Its goal is to examine how one of the nation's most recognizable fictional characters both reflected and reinforced popular public opinion from the time period. I use Cara Finnegan's concept of visual rhetoric specifically composition and David Zarefsky's four senses of rhetorical history to analyze the Man of Tomorrow's early adventures. I make three separate arguments. First I argue that Superman comic books had New Deal sympathies by examining three issues and contextualizing these around popular public thought such as the need for improved workers rights, moral decay caused by slums and admonishment of stockbrokers. Second I detail how Superman comics presented isolationist messages and then interventionist messages. In showing this rhetorical trajectory I discuss the Nye Committee's investigation of the munitions industry and the Roosevelt administration's use of guilt by association to discredit aviator Charles Lindbergh. Finally I argue that Superman during the war years came to represent the American people. This is done through the character's support of war bonds.

American Rivals of James Bond Graham Andrews, 2023-02-22. This is a critical history of spy fiction film and television in the United States with a particular focus on the American fictional spies that rivaled and were often influenced by Ian Fleming's James Bond. James Fenimore Cooper's Harvey Birch based on a real life counterpart appeared in his novel The Spy in 1821. While Harvey Birch's British rivals dominated spy fiction from the late 1800s until the mid 1930s American spy fiction came of age shortly thereafter. The spy boom in novels and films during the 1960s spearheaded by Bond heavily influenced the espionage genre in the United States for years to come including series like The Man from U N C L E and Matt Helm. The author demonstrates that while American authors currently dominate the international spy fiction market James Bond has cast a very long shadow for a very long time.

Whitaker's Four-year Cumulative Book List, 1944-1947, 1949 Wonder Woman and Philosophy Jacob M. Held, 2017-02-21. Wonder Woman and Philosophy: The Amazonian Mystique explores a wide range of philosophical questions surrounding the most popular female superhero of all time from her creation as feminist propaganda during World War II up to the first female lead in the blockbuster DC movie franchise. The first book dedicated to the philosophical questions raised by the complex and enduringly iconic super heroine Fighting fascism with feminism since 1941 considers the power of Wonder Woman as an exploration of gender identity and also that of the human condition what limits us and what we can overcome. Confronts the ambiguities of Wonder Woman from her roles as a feminist cause and fully empowered woman to her objectification as sexual fantasy. Topics explored include origin stories and identity propaganda and art altruism and the ethics of care.
