Morrison, 2012-12-06 At the present stage of development of surface science there has seemed to be a need for a book length review spanning the disciplines of surface physics and surface chemistry a review to summarize and show the connection between the observations from each discipline The various results and theories derived on the one hand from studies of the physical electronic and optical properties of surfaces and on the other hand from studies of the chemical activity of surfaces supplement each other in the search for a realistic model of the surface The improved understanding possible with such an interdisciplinary approach has been confirmed by recent developments which cannot be classified as either surface chemistry or surface physics Specifically recent new experimental techniques and quantum mechanical models have provided a much more accurate picture of the nature of the electronic energy levels bonding orbitals present at a solid surface With this more accurate picture we are now able to reconcile the various chemical and physical models that appeared in the early literature on surfaces The objective of this work has therefore been to describe the results and current models of surface science spanning a broad gray area between surface physics and surface chemistry with some overlap into each of these disciplines Relevant aspects of surface chemistry are discussed we cover chemical interactions where bonding and electronic properties dominate but stop short of specialized topics such as surfactants or liquid liquid interfaces
