chains are important not just in retailing but offer crucial insights and strategies for the ultimate effective management of supply chains in other industries as well. The retail industry has emerged as a fascinating choice for researchers in the field of supply chain management. It presents a vast array of stimulating challenges that have long provided the context of much of the research in the area of operations research and inventory management. However, in recent years, advances in computing capabilities and information technologies, hyper-competition in the retail industry, emergence of multiple retail formats and distribution channels, an ever-increasing trend towards a globally dispersed retail network and a better understanding of the importance of collaboration in the extended supply chain have led to a surge in academic research on topics in retail supply chain management. Many supply chain innovations, e.g., vendor managed inventory, were first conceived and successfully validated in this industry and have since been adopted in others. Conversely, many retailers have been quick to adopt cutting edge practices that first originated in other industries.

Retail Supply Chain Management: Quantitative Models and Empirical Studies 2nd Ed is an attempt to summarize the state of the art in this research as well as offer a perspective on what new applications may lie ahead.

Critical Analysis of the Practice in Global Supply Chain Management at a Retailer Klope Mark, 2014-02-28 Seminar paper from the year 2012 in the subject Business economics Operations Research grade B University of Houston language English abstract This essay takes a critical look at supply chain management practices at a retailer and uses Wal Mart as the case study. This is because the retail industry has been among the successful applicers of supply chain management concepts and Wal Mart has used it strategically in gaining competitive edge against its competitors in the retail store business. It is also widely shown that cooperation among firms is encouraged and supply chains compete rather than firms competing individually. There is a win-win outcome among firms within a given supply chain.
