Beheersing Van Retourlogistiek of Omgekeerde Beheersing Van Logistiek? Marisa P. de Brito, 2004 In the past supply chains were busy fine tuning the logistics from raw material to the end customer Today an increasing flow of products is going back in the chain Thus companies have to manage reverse logistics as well This thesis contributes to a better understanding of reverse logistics The thesis brings insights on reverse logistics decision making and it lays down theoretical principles for reverse logistics as a research field In particular it puts together a framework for reverse logistics identifying the elementary dimensions providing typologies and structuring their interrelations With respect to aiding decision making this thesis comprises return handling and inventory management On the first the focus is on critical factors for the combination vs separation of reverse and forward flows during material handling On the second the main research issue is the value of information One of the findings is that more informed methods do not necessarily lead to the best performance Furthermore this thesis proposes a reflection on the future development of the field Through a Delphi study with an international panel of academics working on the area recommendations are made concerning both research and pedagogy This thesis also poses the following question is it a matter of simply managing reverse logistics or of reversing logistics management The message is logistics cannot go forward without reverse thinking Quantitative Models for Reverse Logistics Moritz Fleischmann, 2012-12-06 Economic marketing and legislative considerations are increasingly leading companies to take back and recover their products after use From a logistics perspective these initiatives give rise to new goods flows from the user back to the producer The management of these goods flows opposite to the traditional supply chain flows is addressed in the recently emerged field of Reverse Logistics This monograph considers quantitative models that support decision making in Reverse Logistics To this end several recent case studies are reviewed Moreover first hand insight from a study on used electronic equipment is reported on On this basis logistics issues arising in the management of reverse goods flows are identified Moreover differences between Reverse Logistics and more traditional logistics contexts are highlighted Finally attention is paid to capturing the characteristics of Reverse Logistics in appropriate quantitative models Contracting, Logistics, Reverse Logistics Dr Robert Lee Gordon, 2016-08-23 Contracting logistics and reverse logistics are intertwined with the project management program management and portfolio management disciplines In recent years organizations have started to offer certifications into the strategic areas of program and portfolios Contracting logistics and reverse logistics are strategic opportunities for companies For this reason three programs benefit from an overlapping text that demonstrates how project program and portfolio management PPPM drives better strategy Ultimately successful strategy leads to increased value and the difficult topics of ethics culture relationships and a company's return on investment ROI The book is divided into 9 sections and a total of 28 chapters Each section culminates with a summary of each section The textbook is followed by three workbooks one each for contracting logistics and reverse logistics The workbooks provide case studies questions and essays for each case study while chapters are concluded with proposed weekly discussion questions sample test quiz questions for each chapter These chapter questions could be used to populate potential final exams Dr Robert Lee Gordon is currently the Program Director for the Reverse Logistics Management department at American Public University Dr Gordon has over twenty five years of professional experience in supply chain management and human resources Dr Gordon earned his Doctorate of Management and Organizational Leadership and his Masters of Business Administration from the University of Phoenix as well earning a Bachelor of Arts degree in History from UCLA Dr Gordon has been teaching for over sixteen years and regularly instructs courses in reverse logistics transportation contract management project management and human resources Dr Gordon has over forty published articles about reverse logistics supply chain management project management human resources education and complexity Dr Gordon also has four published books on the topics of Reverse Logistics Management Complexity and Project Management Virtual Project Management Organizations and Successful Program Management
