Circle of Silence Surrounds Battered Women

The circle of silence surrounding battered women is a topic that has gained national attention in recent years. Many women who have suffered physical and emotional abuse at the hands of their partners find it difficult to seek help. The fear of retaliation, shame, and the financial dependence on their abusers often prevent them from leaving their homes. Support groups and counseling services are available, but many women are unaware of these resources. The community must continue to raise awareness and provide safe havens for these women.
