U.S. Department Of Education* ,1998 We the People Sharareh Frouzesh Bennett,Suzanne Soule,2005 We the People The Citizen and the Constitution is an educational program developed by the Center for Civic Education the Center The program instructs students on the history and principles of American constitutional democracy with the primary goal of promoting civic competence and responsibility among the nation's elementary middle and secondary students. Additionally, the instructional program is intended to enhance students' understanding of the institutions of American constitutional democracy and to reinforce the contemporary relevance of the U.S. Constitution and the Bill of Rights. The program utilizes highly acclaimed curricular materials developed by the Center. At the high school level, classes can choose to enter a formal competition advancing from congressional district and state competitions to national finals. The competition is structured as a simulated congressional hearing in which students' knowledge of the Constitution and American democratic institutions is tested, allowing students an opportunity to apply the knowledge they have acquired through the curriculum and to strengthen their analytical skills in a practical way. In the spring of 2005, a survey was given to students participating in the national finals competition of the We the People: The Citizen and the Constitution We the People Program to assess its impact at the highest level on student knowledge of and support for democratic institutions and processes. This report compares the scores and responses of We the People national finalists to the relevant national sample.
