2.5 Membrane Permeability

What Can Cross the Membrane?

Types of molecules that cross the membrane:

- Small nonpolar molecules (like  $O_2$  and  $CO_2$ ) can diffuse directly through the phospholipid bilayer without any help. These molecules are small and nonpolar.
- Small polar uncharged molecules like water can pass through the membrane in small amounts. Water molecules are very small and can pass through the membrane.
- Large polar molecules and ions (like glucose, amino acids,  $Na^+$ ,  $K^+$ ) cannot cross the membrane on their own. They need transport proteins to help them cross. These molecules and ions typically cross through transport proteins.

The hydrophobic tails of the phospholipids are the main barrier to the passage of most molecules. The small, nonpolar molecules can pass through the membrane without any help.

How Different Molecules Cross the Membrane

Molecule Type	Examples	Can Cross Easily?	Needs Transport Protein?
Small nonpolar	$O_2$ , $CO_2$ , $N_2$	Yes	No
Small polar uncharged	Water	Yes (in small amounts)	No
Large polar	Glucose, amino acids	No	Yes
Ions	$Na^+$ , $K^+$ , $Cl^-$	No	Yes

1.5 Representing a Quantitative Variable with Graphs

Remember that a quantitative variable (or quantitative variable) refers to variables that can be measured and are numerical values. Quantitative variables can be further categorized into discrete and continuous variables.

- Discrete variable: A variable that can only take on a limited number of values. The number of children in a family is a discrete variable. Examples of discrete variables include the number of children in a family, the number of cars in a parking lot, the number of votes received by a political candidate.
- Continuous variable: A variable that can take on an infinite number of values. The height of a person is a continuous variable. Examples of continuous variables include the height of a person, the weight of a person, the time it takes to run a mile, and the temperature of a liquid.

This page will describe how we represent and display quantitative data. The following table is a summary of the different types of quantitative data and how they are displayed. The goal is to help you understand how to represent and display quantitative data.

2.5 The Demographic Transition Model

Remember the Demographic Transition Model? It is a model that describes the changes in a country's population over time.

Demographic Transition Model

The Demographic Transition Model (DTM) is a model that describes the changes in a country's population over time. It is based on the idea that a country's population will grow rapidly in the early stages of development and then level off as the country becomes more developed.

Stage 1

Stage 1 is the earliest stage of the DTM. It is characterized by a high birth rate and a high death rate. The population grows slowly because the high death rate offsets the high birth rate.
