Swanson, Jeff Tayman, 2012-05-23 Providing a unified and comprehensive treatment of the theory and techniques of sub national population estimation this much needed publication does more than collate disparate source material It examines hitherto unexplored methodological links between differing types of estimation from both the demographic and sample survey traditions and is a self contained primer that combines academic rigor with a wealth of real world examples that are useful models for demographers Between censuses which are expensive administratively complex and thus infrequent demographers and government officials must estimate population using either demographic modeling techniques or statistical surveys that sample a fraction of residents These estimates play a central role in vital decisions that range from funding allocations and rate setting to education health and housing provision They also provide important data to companies undertaking market research However mastering small area and sub national population estimation is complicated by scattered incomplete and outdated academic sources an issue this volume tackles head on Rapidly increasing population mobility is making inter census estimation ever more important to strategic planners This book will make the theory and techniques involved more accessible to anyone with an interest in developing or using population estimates

Office of Population Censuses and Surveys,1991 Regional Science in Business Graham Clarke,Moss Madden,2013-03-09 Graham Clarke and Moss Madden 1 1 Background In the mid 1990s there were a number of papers in regional science that questioned the relevance and purpose of the entire sub discipline Bailly and Coffey 1994 for example talked of regional science in crisis They argued that there were two fundamental problems First regional science was too theoretical in the sense that many of its products were models that could neither be calibrated too complex or operationalised too abstract in the real world They suggested that regional science had not sufficiently demonstrated that it can address real world problems and subsequently lacked a focus on relevant policy issues Second they argued that regional science had become too narrow in focus and had moved away too far from real people and their daily concerns or struggles in life This was not the first time we had witnessed these sorts of arguments both from outside the discipline and from within Sayer 1976 was perhaps the first to argue for a shift from a model based focus in regional science to one based on political economy Breheny 1984 criticised the deep ignorance among regional scientists of the nature of practical policy making and implementation see also Rodwin 1987 for similar views in the mid 1980s Such self reflection is a feature of many disciplines as they reach maturity There have been many similar reflections in geography Johnston 1996 Barnes 1996 and economics see the collection in the January edition of the Economic Journal 1991
