Drugs, Crime, and Justice Larry K. Gaines, Janine Kremling, 2013-12-11 The twenty six articles in this edited volume provide perspective on the interrelated issues surrounding the use of drugs in society Although drugs have long been a social problem the importance of the issue and the involvement of the criminal justice system have varied across time Public concern has typically centered on illegal drugs but the drug issue today is even more complex given the impact of prescription drugs Exaggeration has been a constant theme in the history of public policy on drugs usually playing on public fear to demonize specific drugs and users Some drugs are more dangerous than others The variations in effects impact enforcement prevention and treatment If we are going to criminalize drugs and drug usage policies and penalties should be based on the relative dangerousness of a drug or class of drugs Policies can reduce harm create harm or both Our current drug policies attempt to reduce harm through law enforcement We arrest anyone involved in drug activities under the premise of protecting society These same policies however result in the incarceration of large numbers of people they are expensive they overburden the criminal justice system and they have lasting consequences for those caught up in the drug war no matter how minor their offenses Drug policies should be weighed carefully implementing those that result in the least amount of harm to society The editors have collected timely articles that provide perspective and a foundation for an informed approach to addressing problems associated with drug use

Fentiman, 2019-05-01 A gripping explanation of the biases that lead to the blaming of pregnant women and mothers. Are mothers truly a danger to their children's health? In 2004 a mentally disabled young woman in Utah was charged by prosecutors with murder after she declined to have a Caesarian section and subsequently delivered a stillborn child. In 2010 a pregnant woman who attempted suicide when the baby's father abandoned her was charged with murder and attempted feticide after the daughter she delivered prematurely died. These are just two of the many cases that portray mothers as the major source of health risk for their children. The American legal system is deeply shaped by unconscious risk perception that distorts core legal principles to punish mothers who fail to protect their children. In Blaming Mothers Professor Fentiman explores how mothers became legal targets. She explains the psychological processes we use to confront tragic events and the unconscious race class and gender biases that affect our perceptions and influence the decisions of prosecutors judges and jurors. Fentiman examines legal actions taken against pregnant women in the name of fetal protection including court ordered C sections and maintaining brain dead pregnant women on life support to gestate a fetus as well as charges brought against mothers who fail to protect their children from an abusive male partner. She considers the claims of physicians and policymakers that refusing to breastfeed is risky to children's health. And she explores the legal treatment of lead poisoned children in which landlords and lead paint manufacturers are not held responsible for exposing children to high levels of lead while mothers are blamed for their children's injuries. Blaming Mothers is a powerful call to reexamine who and what we consider risky to children's health. Fentiman offers an important framework for evaluating childhood risk that rather than scapegoating mothers provides concrete solutions that promote the health of all of America's children. Read a piece by Linda Fentiman on shaming and blaming mothers under the law on The Gender Policy Report. Women's Mental Health Sarah E. Romans, Mary Violette Seeman, 2006 Women's Mental Health: A Life Cycle Approach brings together the latest research and clinical information on the wide variety of psychiatric problems that affect women in unique ways. The book is organized around the female life cycle: childhood adolescence adulthood reproduction and aging and addresses specific disorders as they present at each stage. Chapters examine the biological hormonal and psychosocial foundations of female psychiatric disorders at each life cycle stage and offer a framework for thinking about clinical problems. Expert commentaries are included to expand on key issues and provide an insightful overview of each life cycle stage The international group of contributors ensures complete coverage of cross cultural issues Concluding chapters discuss mental health services for women worldwide
