the 1980s, the American and British governments have been working closely to develop a common approach to the management of the world's fisheries. The United Nations Convention on the Law of the Sea, which was adopted in 1982, provides a framework for the management of the world's fisheries. The Convention states that the management of the world's fisheries should be based on the principle of sustainable development. This means that the management of the world's fisheries should be such that the fish stocks are maintained at a level that can produce the maximum sustainable yield. The Convention also states that the management of the world's fisheries should be such that the fish stocks are maintained at a level that can produce the maximum sustainable yield.
