Abstract: The main aim of this research was to investigate the effect of a 12-week training program on the physical and psychological characteristics of young soccer players. The study was conducted in a laboratory setting. The participants were 15 young soccer players (14 males and 1 female) aged 16-18 years. They were divided into two groups: a control group (n=7) and an experimental group (n=8). The experimental group underwent a 12-week training program consisting of aerobic, anaerobic, and strength training. The control group did not undergo any training. The physical characteristics measured were maximum oxygen consumption ($\dot{V}O_{2max}$), maximum power output (Pmax), and maximum speed (Vmax). The psychological characteristics measured were anxiety, depression, and self-esteem. The results showed that the experimental group had significantly higher values for $\dot{V}O_{2max}$, Pmax, and Vmax compared to the control group. Additionally, the experimental group had significantly lower levels of anxiety and depression, and higher levels of self-esteem compared to the control group. The findings suggest that a 12-week training program can improve the physical and psychological characteristics of young soccer players.

10. THE CONTRACTOR'S OBLIGATION TO OBTAIN NECESSARY PERMITS
The Contractor shall be responsible for obtaining all necessary permits, licenses, and approvals from the appropriate authorities for the construction of the Project. The Contractor shall provide copies of all such permits, licenses, and approvals to the Employer for its review and record.
