By considering the latest political events and case law including the NSA PRISM surveillance program controversy the planned EU data protection amendments and the latest European Court of Human Rights jurisprudence it provides an analysis of the ongoing legal discourse on global cybertechnology. Using examples from contemporary state practice including content filtering and Internet shutdowns during the Arab Spring as well as the PRISM controversy the authors identify limits of state and third party interference with individual human rights of Internet users. Analysis is based on existing human rights standards as enshrined within international law including the Universal Declaration of Human Rights International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights European Convention on Human Rights and recommendations from the Human Rights Council.
