The Effect of Information Quality on

Supply Chain Performance Kenneth James Petersen, 1999 This research is conducted within the broad theme of how interorganizational information systems may help firms to make better decisions and how these improved decisions may lead to improved firm performance. The theoretical model developed in this research reflects the notion that when higher quality information is exchanged between supply chain partners outcomes of joint planning and decision making processes will be improved which will lead to improved firm performance. Within this framework one of the fundamental propositions is that an effective interorganizational information system will increase the quality of the information exchanged between supply chain partners. The increased quality of information associated with interorganizational information systems is expected to be associated with better outcomes from joint planning and decision making processes which are in turn expected to be associated with greater levels of performance. The theoretical model was tested using a sample of 169 purchasing and supply chain managers and executives primarily located in the United States. Structural equation modeling (SEM) was employed in this research to estimate the parameters associated with the relationships of interest. Key results from this research include the finding that information quality has a significant impact on the outcomes of eight different joint planning and decision making processes and that these processes are associated with certain firm level performance outcomes. Further, within several of these processes the effect of information quality on joint planning and decision making outcomes is significantly larger for interorganizational information system enabled information quality than for non-interorganizational information system enabled information quality. Theoretical and practical insight is developed within each of the eight joint planning and decision making contexts.
