Transitioning to Concept-based Teaching William Howard Deane, 2016. Many associate degree nursing programs throughout the United States and U.S. have adopted a concept based curriculum (CBC). The limited number of research studies completed to date have primarily focused on student learning and end of program outcomes. Additionally, there is a dearth of research on the experience of nurse educators who have transitioned from traditional to concept based teaching. The aims of this study were to 1) describe the experience of nurse educators who transition to concept based teaching, 2) identify whether a common process of transitioning to concept based teaching exists amongst study participants, 3) identify facilitators and barriers faculty encounter in the process of transitioning to concept based teaching, and 4) compare study findings to the managing transitions model to determine areas of congruence and the need to refine or expand the model. A qualitative description design with responsive interviewing as the principle method was used to elicit data in this study. The purposive sample of 19 participants consisted of faculty who taught in associate degree programs in the U.S. that deliver a concept based curriculum. Participants were recruited from an Internet nurse educator email discussion group as well as an e-mail invitation sent to deans/directors of associate degree programs that deliver a concept based curriculum. Email interviews were conducted between March and April 2016. Content analysis was used to derive initial codification of interview data as well as within and between interview comparison of codes to arrive at theme and sub themes. Five major themes with associated sub themes emerged from the data analysis that represented the participant's description of the transition experience. The major themes were recognizing fears, facing conflict, working out of one's comfort zone, seeing successes, and self talk and questioning self. A purpose of participant transition from traditional to concept based teaching emerged, consisting of five phases that included responding to the decision to adopt a CBC, developing the curriculum, implementing the curriculum, seeing results, and reflecting back a continuing journey. Self talk and questioning self transcended all the phases and provided a framework for reflection that assisted the individual with moving forward with the transition process. Participants described emotional reactions such as fear of failure and questioned whether they could be successful in working in a team which were generally analyzed through self talk. Seeing positive student outcomes helped to convince faculty of the decision to move to a CBC while others continue to question the effectiveness of the change. Four major themes arose that best represented facilitators that assisted the participant throughout the transition process. These facilitators included identifying inner support, building team cohesiveness, learning from and sharing knowledge with others.

and seeing positive student outcomes Three major themes emerged that represented barriers throughout the participant s transition to concept based teaching These major themes included dealing with personal struggles lacking support within the school nursing and lacking support outside the school of nursing Similarities arose that were consistent with the three stages of managing transitions model future refinement of the managing transitions model may include reflective question cues to assist individuals as they transition through the phases of change as well as guidance to assist those who continue to resist change Implications for theory education policy practice and research are also discussion curriculum strategies    Concept-based Curriculum Judy R. Hyland,2019 This hermeneutic phenomenological study explored the lived experiences of nurse educators practicing within a concept based curriculum CBC Given the significant change in the framework of the nursing content and the pedagogical model changes of a concept based curriculum nurse educator experiences have provided insight to the efficacy and pedagogical usability of this type of curriculum Using an inductive process a set of themes emerged that represented the participants meaning about working in a concept based curriculum The shared experiences of the nurse educators uncovered the overall essence of their world This new truth uncovered four themes The themes included 1 a need for change which highlighted administration faculty motivation for a radical shift in program teaching 2 life during transition which described the process faculty underwent as they worked to make program changes 3 the teaching experiences which focused on the faculty experience after the transition and 4 usefulness and efficacy which addressed the faculties appraisal of the CBC This research revealed that the faculty perception regarding the students ability to make clinical judgments was strengthened by the use of a CBC and conceptual teaching practices They attributed this skill improvement to the introduction to clinical judgement earlier in the curriculum and frequency of practice throughout the curriculum as a factor Findings suggest that the transition of the adoption of the curriculum is difficult at best After proper training and time to practice the faculty found the curriculum to be efficacious and the pedagogical model useful in preparing students for entry level practice The study elicited possible actions by nurse educational leaders that will make the transitioning into concept based curricula less arduous Findings from this study can provided guidance for future adoption of concept based curricula
