Sufferings In Africa Irish History Classics:

Sufferings in Africa James Riley, 2001-11-01 He was used to adventure He was used to the high seas He was Captain James Riley American seaman and independent businessman bound for Europe in 1815 He never made it Instead the young sea captain and his crew were shipwrecked off the coast of Muslim controlled Morocco The sea salt was still wet in their hair when the battered survivors were pounced upon by local natives ensnared enchained and marched off into the horrors of African slavery Riley s narrative reads like fiction but is based on solid fact Most of his men died A few were separated and sold into the interior of the continent never to be seen again He was the first American to venture near the legendary Timbuctoo Yet the conditions were so barbaric the food so scanty and the beatings so regular that Riley dropped from 240 down to 90 pounds After many desperate ordeals the American sailor and a handful of his men were ransomed by a sympathetic English merchant who had learned of their plight Upon his return to the United States Riley penned Sufferings in Africa which went on to become America s first best seller reportedly selling more than a million copies through various editions Yet Sufferings in Africa is much more than just an adventure travel classic In a time when the United States was grappling with the thorny issue of slavery within her own borders Riley s startling book told a tale of Uncle Tom s Cabin in reverse Here was a story of Caucasian Americans under the whip and in the chains that held millions of Black Americans at the same time Scholars are currently researching clues that this deservedly famous book was read by a young Abraham Lincoln and thus helped seal his own heart against slavery A classic story of endurance and bravery then this important American book remains as fresh today as the day it was first released

Memories of the Classical Underworld in Irish and Caribbean Literature Madeleine Scherer, 2021-09-20 Classical Memories is an intervention into the field of adaptation studies taking the example of classical reception to show that adaptation is a process that can be driven by and produce intertextual memories I see classical memories as a memory driven type of adaptation that draws on and reproduces schematic and otherwise de contextualised conceptions of antiquity and its cultural exports in broadly speaking the twentieth and twenty first centuries These memory driven adaptations differ often in significant ways from more traditional adaptations that seek to either continue or deconstruct a long running tradition that can be traced back to antiquity as well as its canonical points of reception in later ages When investigating such a popular and widespread set of narratives characters and images like those that remain of Graeco Roman antiquity terms like adaptation and reception could and should be nuanced further to allow us to understand the complex interactions between modern works and classical antiquity in more detail particularly when it pertains to postcolonial or post digital classical reception In Classical Memories I propose that understanding certain types of adaptations as intertextual memories allows us to do just that
