Here is Ted Bundy's last interview with Reverent Dr James Dobson, who at this time was on a mission to rid the world of pornography with The Meese Commission. Ted Bundy was executed at 7:15 am the day after this conversation was recorded, on January 24th, 1989.

This is a proper transcript of Bundy's final interview, which is often shortened or rephrased with no respect to the initial word. In accordance to the rules of a sociological transcript, I chose to maintain the (numerous) hesitations and interruptions which are to be found between two people engaged in a dialogue, aiming at rendering the transcript all the most vivid and close to the original interview. Besides, Bundy's most obvious hesitations and rephrasing appear when the interview comes across polemical issues, like his so-called remorse or the period of his first murders. When one bypasses these hesitations, one might have the illusion that Bundy's just rationally doing the job, answering the interviewer's questions with straightforward facts and theories – what he actually does on certain topics.

Before reading, note that I am French, and that even if I've got good ear for English, there may be some mistakes (besides a couple of "inaudible" parts). I cross-checked this version with already available transcripts, but as I said, there are usually big parts of the interview which are always damagingly missing. I'm currently working on a French transcript.

Well, it may seem inappropriate to wish you to "enjoy" ... but still, enjoy!

Your most humble servant,

BôOpS
