Computers and Society Ronald M. Baecker, 2019-04-24 The last century has seen enormous leaps in the development of digital technologies and most aspects of modern life have changed significantly with their widespread availability and use. Technology at various scales: supercomputers, corporate networks, desktop and laptop computers, the internet, tablets, mobile phones, and processors that are hidden in everyday devices and are so small you can barely see them with the naked eye, all pervade our world in a major way.

Computers and Society: Modern Perspectives is a wide-ranging and comprehensive textbook that critically assesses the global technical achievements in digital technologies and how they are applied in media, education, and learning; medicine and health; free speech, democracy, and government; and war and peace. Ronald M. Baecker reviews critical ethical issues raised by computers such as digital inclusion, security, safety, privacy, automation, and work, and discusses social, political, and ethical controversies and choices now faced by society. Particular attention is paid to new and exciting developments in artificial intelligence and machine learning and the issues that have arisen from our complex relationship with AI.

Seminar paper from the year 2008 in the subject Business economics General grade 1.7
Humboldt University of Berlin language English abstract

The internet is one of the newest communication technologies and has run through fundamental technological progress during the last years. During the end of the 1990s many internet firms were established whose investors expected high revenues. However, many of these platforms could not meet the expectations; the stock prices of many firms declined rapidly and many firms filed for bankruptcy. Since 2004 the internet developed to the Web 2.0 which suggests that a better version of the web exists today. Spendings in online advertisements were interestingly not effected by the crash of the internet market at the beginning of the 21st century. Since 1998 the net advertising revenues have increased constantly. In 2008 US American companies will spend more for internet advertisements than for TV commercials. In the past famous Web 2.0 websites were sold for high prices: the Holtzbrinck publishing group bought StudiVZ for around 85 million euros; the video website Youtube was sold to Google for 1.65 billion dollars; and News Corporation paid 580 million dollars for Myspace. However, all of these social networks still have to supply evidence that their company value is not overestimated. As far as the advertisement revenues are concerned, none of them generate significant profits yet.

In this paper I will analyze the performance of advertisements on Web 2.0 websites as exemplified by social networks. First I will trace the developments that led to the so-called Web 2.0 and define their characteristics. Then I will focus on social networks, analyze their features, and the possibilities to use them for advertisement purposes. Finally I will analyze several possibilities to advertise on Web 2.0 websites.
