Abstract—The purpose of this study was to determine the effect of a 12-week training program on the heart rate (HR) and blood pressure (BP) of sedentary, middle-aged men. The subjects were divided into two groups: a control group and a training group. The training group performed a 12-week aerobic exercise program, while the control group remained sedentary. HR and BP were measured at baseline and at the end of the 12-week period. The results showed that the training group had a significant decrease in both HR and BP compared to the control group. The decrease in HR was approximately 10 beats per minute, and the decrease in BP was approximately 10 mmHg. These findings suggest that a 12-week training program can effectively reduce HR and BP in sedentary, middle-aged men.

Abstract

- Abstract The purpose of this study was to determine the effect of a 12-week training program on the physical fitness of 100 male police officers. The program consisted of three sessions per week, each lasting 45 minutes. The sessions included cardiovascular exercise, strength training, and flexibility exercises. The results showed that the officers' cardiovascular fitness improved significantly, as measured by a 1.5-mile run time. The strength training also resulted in improvements in muscle strength and endurance. The flexibility exercises helped to increase the officers' range of motion and reduce the risk of injury. The study concluded that a 12-week training program can effectively improve the physical fitness of police officers.
