Srebrenica In The Aftermath Of Genocide:

Srebrenica in the Aftermath of Genocide Lara J. Nettelfield, Sarah E. Wagner, 2013-12-09 The fall of the United Nations safe area of Srebrenica in July 1995 to Bosnian Serb and Serbian forces stands out as the international community's most egregious failure to intervene during the Bosnian war. It led to genocide, forced displacement, and a legacy of loss. But wartime inaction has since spurred numerous postwar attempts to address the atrocities' effects on Bosnian society and its diaspora. Srebrenica in the Aftermath of Genocide reveals how interactions between local, national, and international interventions from refugee return and resettlement to commemorations, war crimes trials, immigration proceedings, and election reform have led to subtle positive effects of social repair despite persistent attempts at denial. Using an interdisciplinary approach, diverse research methods, and more than a decade of fieldwork in five countries, Lara J. Nettelfield and Sarah E. Wagner trace the genocide's reverberations in Bosnia and abroad. The findings of this study have implications for research on post-conflict societies around the world.

Protection Against Genocide Neal Riemer,2000-03-30 Without succumbing to utopian fantasies or realistic pessimism Riemer and his contributors call for strengthening the key institutions of a global human rights regime developing an effective policy of prudent prevention of genocide working out a sagacious strategy of keenly targeted sanctions political economic military judicial and adopting a guiding philosophy of just humanitarian intervention They underscore significant changes in the international system the end of the Cold War economic globalization the communications revolution that hold open the opportunity for significant if modest movement toward strengthening key institutions The essays explore key problems in working toward prevention of genocide They highlight the existence of considerable early warning of genocide and emphasize that the real problem is a lack of political will in key global institutions Sanctions especially economic sanctions may punish a genocidal regime but at the expense of innocent civilians Thus more clearly targeted sanctions are seen as essential The argument on behalf of a standing police force to deal with the crime of genocide as they show is powerful and controversial powerful because the need is persuasive controversial because political realists question its cost and political feasibility Implementing a philosophy of just humanitarian intervention requires an appreciation of the difficulties of interpreting those principles in difficult concrete situations A permanent international criminal tribunal to deter and punish genocide they argue will put into place a much needed component of a global human rights regime A thoughtful analysis for scholars and students of international politics and law and human rights in general
