Ding, Phillip Charles Saunders, Scott Harold, 2015 How will China use its increasing military capabilities in the future China faces a complicated security environment with a wide range of internal and external threats Rapidly expanding international interests are creating demands for the People's Liberation Army PLA to conduct new missions ranging from protecting Chinese shipping from Somali pirates to evacuating citizens from Libya The most recent Chinese defense white paper states that the armed forces must make serious preparations to cope with the most complex and difficult scenarios so as to ensure proper responses at any time and under any circumstances Based on a conference co sponsored by Taiwan's Council of Advanced Policy Studies RAND Carnegie Endowment for International Peace and National Defense University this book brings together leading experts from the United States and Taiwan to examine how the PLA prepares for a range of domestic border and maritime contingencies The book includes chapters on how the PLA domestic security forces and the civilian government conduct contingency planning and how military commanders can draw upon national level military assets and mobilize civilian resources to execute their plans Substantive chapters assess PLA planning for potential domestic contingencies such as suppressing internal unrest border contingencies involving India Myanmar North Korea Afghanistan and Central Asia and maritime contingencies in both the near and the far seas Authors also examine PLA preparations and performance in disaster relief counterpiracy and noncombatant evacuation operations Improving PLA capabilities are giving Chinese leaders new options to respond to domestic and international crises but the PLA still has significant limitations in projecting and sustaining power especially in contested environments Back cover Naval War College Review, 2018 The Middle East Military Balance, 1984 Mark Heller, Dov Tamari, 1984 U.S./Soviet Military Balance John M. Collins, 1983 India's Nuclear Triad Ajey Lele, Parveen Bhardwaj, 2013 The Gulf Military Balance Anthony H. Cordesman, 2012 The report shows that the Gulf military balance is dominated by five major groups of military forces the

Southern Gulf states Iran Iraq outside powers like the US and non state actors like the various elements of Al Qaeda the Mahdi militia and various tribal forces These forces are evolving in many ways Iran now presents a major threat in terms of its asymmetric and proxy warfare assets its growing missile arsenal and its potential nuclear capability The growing political unrest and instability in the region is creating new internal security challenges Domestic unrest in countries like Yemen could create new threats that cross the Saudi and Omani borders The threat of terrorism has so far been contained but remains all too real and has driven many regional states to make major increases in their paramilitary security and special forces The rising threats from asymmetric and proxy warfare nuclear weapons internal security threats and terrorism make it difficult to assess the military balance Hard numbers are only available on classic measures of conventional military strength or the total size of new force elements like paramilitary and missile forces There is no clear way to measure the balance of conventional and irregular forces in asymmetric conflicts or how missiles and proliferation will affect the balance
