Make Them Process It

Jeffery Frieden, 2017-11-26 Teaching writing and composition at the secondary level is hard. Getting students to develop writing skills in context and that build on one another is complicated. After that students need to be able to remember and retrieve all that learning. There are plenty of resources out there that can help struggling teachers manage these complex challenges. Make Them Process It: Uncovering New Value in the Writer's Notebook can help writing teachers streamline all the necessary concepts and skills they teach throughout the school year into one easy to manage instructional tool. The Writer's Notebook Founded on the Writer's Notebook practice introduced in Kelly Gallagher's Teaching Adolescent Writers and drawing on a decade of teaching experience, Jeffery E. Frieden presents a convenient way to set up and run the Writer's Notebook in the secondary classroom. Included are tips for prompting student writing, coaching students to generate their own topics and creating ways to keep writing fresh through the whole school year. More than just providing a teacher's guide for prompting students to fill a notebook with first draft writing, Jeffery takes teachers through a step by step guide that helps students to make a plan for revision, compose a second draft, host a conversation about their improvements, add style to their second draft through grammar instruction and reflect on their revisions through metacognition. Out of his failures and successes over the past 13 years, Jeffery has put together a straightforward no nonsense approach to teaching writing with The Writer's Notebook.

Successful Urban Adolescent Writers Erin J. Mander, 2012 The goal of the research study was to explore the cognitive, social and affective factors that contribute to the development of 8th grade writing skill. The central research question for this study was How does a collaborative model of teaching writing prepares students for high achievement on Florida Writes? The researcher successfully answered this inquiry by asserting the following supporting questions: How does school culture impact teacher collaboration and student engagement in teaching writing? What is the relationship between engaging in a collaborative model of teaching writing and improvement of writing skill in middle level students? The study determined how and why the writing skill was developed at an urban rural middle school in a Central Florida School District. The rationale for completing research at Horizon Middle School was to provide an exemplar in the teaching of writing skill, a phenomenon. Horizon Middle School presented a learning community that was entrenched in the same challenging demographics but distinctly showed a
