Teaching Literature in High School Thomas M. McCann,John V. Knapp,2021-12-15 In looking for an approach to teaching literature in high school teachers largely fall back on the methods that they had experienced as students These practices often involve a teacher assigning a complex work of literature and then assessing students reading through in class recitations or quizzes Teachers typically dominate the discourse and sometimes take charge of the task by reading aloud whole swathes of texts to their students We know from our own experience as teachers supervisors of teachers and student teachers and researchers in the field that students are often bored with these approaches and teachers are frequently frustrated with learners unenthusiastic responses to the teachers favorite works of literature There has to be a better way This book offers approaches to engage students in productive procedures for reading complex texts and provides sample activities to allow learners to practice those procedures Suggestions for Teaching Literature in Secondary Schools School District of Philadelphia, Pa. Curriculum Office,1960 Teaching Literature and Writing in the Secondary Classroom

Michael Segedy,2016-11-14 This book contains four essays written over twenty eight years ago while I was teaching writing and literature in the secondary school classroom The four essays I have included here published in various English journals over the years represent what I once believed were original and effective approaches to teaching writing and literature I do not wish to make apologies for the unpolished prose style of the essays or for arguments I once would have avidly defended but today no longer stir a whole lot of zeal in me I offer them to you as they appeared in the journals and anthologies Hopefully a new generation of English teachers will find a few of the ideas contained in the essays of some value today
