OBJECTIVES:

1. To help them develop the skill of working in a group setting.
2. To help them develop confidence of sharing ideas and opinions in group setting.
3. To help them develop trust for team members.

LESSON PLAN:

We will start this lesson with an activity. Divide your class in two or more groups, maximum have 4-5 students in each group. Tell them, that for this game/activity you all need to trust your group members. We are going to play Human Knot! Yes, you heard it right. Here are the steps to follow:

- (i) Ask each group to hold hands and form a circle. Remember where each member is standing, it is their original position.
- (ii) Each member of the group has to cross their arms, and hold each other (refer to image 2 ).
- (iii) Now, they have to return to their original position without letting go of each other's hand!

You can either do this with a time limit or at end if no group is able to solve, you help them or just terminate it there followed by discussion.

Discussion is the main part of the activity. Ask them questions like:

- What do you think was the point of this activity?
- According to you what you would have done differently that could help in solving the knot?
- What role did the your team mates play?

Similarly add leading questions based on how your activity ends.

order to make them mature human beings After a theoretical background about teaching politics by intertwining two subjects and a special focus on group work I explain the plan for an introductory lesson on the British political system in eleventh grade that is subject of this term paper in detail Apparently teaching politics is not self evident as it was relatively complicated to find authentic material on the topic Based on this it is paramount to consider different ways of giving the students an understanding of the most fundamental part of our society the political system The possibilities to do so form one research question I follow when writing this paper Most politicians the so called experts on our democracy are just regular people who gained political experience by entering a political party on one or another adventurous way The question that arises here is how these people qualified themselves to lead our country They did not study politics or economics So basically what they call qualification is just the will to participate in the state s political life From the moment on they enter this world of politics they seem to exclude themselves from normal peoples lifes They decide on things they barely know anything about as if they were in some way superior As George Burns said when politicians would ask the society for suggestions or opinions they would finally be able to control politics in a way that is truly in favor of the people
