Using the Laser

Marksman Training System to Predict Rifle Marksman Qualification Monte D. Smith, 2003 To determine the relation between simulation Laser Marksman Training System (LMTS) and live fire based rifle marksmanship performance, 186 Reserve Component RC soldiers from Idaho and Oregon fired for qualification on a scaled LMTS version and live fire version of the Army's standard pop up target qualification course. LMTS was fired under either a dry fire mode or a Blazer (i.e. sound recoil replicator) mode. Statistically significant positive linear relations were found and then validated between first run live fire scores and both LMTS dry fire (r = 0.50) and Blazer based (r = 0.55) scores. These relations were of sufficient strength to permit development of easy to use tools for accurately predicting soldier chances of first run live fire qualification. With these tools, RC marksmanship trainers can implement a competency based training program where soldiers most in need of remedial training (i.e. poor shooters) can be quickly identified and the point at which sufficient training has been provided (i.e. when first run live fire qualification is likely easily determined). These tools also provide RC unit commanders with empirically derived live fire performance standards needed to support use of LMTS in place of live fire for rifle marksmanship proficiency validation purposes when standard pop up target course range facilities are not readily available. Although both tools will serve these purposes, that based on LMTS dry fire is recommended because of the added expense of firing with Blazer without an accompanying statistically significant increased predictive benefit.
