Mourdoukoutas,1999-07-30 Mourdoukoutas argues that as globalization gains momentum and reengineering becomes universal firms can no longer be sure of achieving sustainable competitive advantages through improved operating effectiveness alone The new business strategy will focus on revenue growth and on the constructive destruction of conventional corporations through collective entrepreneurship and its division in the product supply chain To enhance revenues through the management of constructive destruction companies must achieve organizational mutations and permutations turning themselves from hierarchical managerial units into entrepreneurial networks These entrepreneurial networks are communities that share a common fate the risks and rewards associated with the discovery and exploitation of new businesses Mourdoukoutas says that in some cases entrepreneurial networks can be extended outside the conventional borders of the corporation vertically to suppliers distributors and customers and horizontally to former competitors In such networks the focus of business strategy should not be on the division of labor by task or process rather upon the division of entrepreneurship and its diffusion among all of the firm s members This is a challenging and thoughtful study and analysis for corporate management and their academic colleagues

Human Rights and the Dark Side of Globalisation Thomas Gammeltoft-Hansen,Jens Vedsted-Hansen,2016-12-08 This edited volume examines the continued viability of international human rights law in the context of growing transnational law enforcement With states increasingly making use of global governance modes core exercises of public authority such as migration control surveillance detention and policing are increasingly conducted extraterritorially outsourced to foreign governments or delegated to non state actors New forms of cooperation raise difficult questions about divided shared and joint responsibility under international human rights law At the same time some governments engage in transnational law enforcement exactly to avoid such responsibilities creatively seeking to navigate the complex overlapping and sometimes unclear bodies of international law As such this volume argues that this area represents a particular dark side of globalisation requiring both scholars and practitioners to revisit basic assumptions and legal strategies The volume will be of great interest to students scholars and practitioners of international relations human rights and public international law
