Bending Over Backwards Lennard J. Davis, 2002-09-01 With the advent of the human genome cloning stem cell research and many other developments in the way we think of the body disability studies provides an entirely new way of thinking about the body in its relation to politics the environment the legal system and global economies Bending Over Backwards reexamines issues concerning the relationship between disability and normality in the light of postmodern theory and political activism Davis takes up homosexuality the Americans with Disabilities Act the legal system the history of science and medicine eugenics and genetics Throughout he maintains that disability is the prime category of postmodernity because it redefines the body in relation to concepts of normalcy which underlie the very foundations of democracy and humanistic ideas about the body Bending Over Backwards argues that disability can become the new prism through which postmodernity examines and defines itself supplanting the categories of race class gender and sexual orientation

Ending Disability Discrimination Gary E. May, Martha B. Raske, 2005 Ending Disability Discrimination defines disability as a social construction not as an immutable physical limitation and gives social work students and practitioners a model that can be used to transform how people with disabilities are treated Highlights Uses an innovative model for understanding disability that draws upon a concept familiar to social work students discrimination Chapter 5 Presents disability related impairment as a consequence of discrimination making the target system the social environment rather than the person with the disability a viewpoint that shows commitment to social justice and draws upon the systems perspective used for understanding other minority groups Provides a single source through which to explore the shifting history of scholarly thinking about disability issues by including chapters from respected disability scholars that chronicle and analyze the evolution of the conceptualization of disability
