Developing and Implementing a Public Health and Criminological Approach to Tackling Sexual Abuse Kieran McCartan, Anne Eason, Sarah Senker, Nick Addis, Cody Porter, 2025-08-19 This edited collection draws together and contextualises research on the Epidemiological Criminology (EpiCrim) approaches to sexual abuse carried out by the University of West England (UWE) Bristol. EpiCrim sees crime and offending behaviour, including sexual abuse, as a public health issue and advocates that to prevent first-time or repeat offending behaviour, we have to work in a bespoke way across a number of populations: individual, interpersonal, community, and societal. The book introduces the area of EpiCrim and how it works to address sexual abuse, before examining the UWE-based research on the prevention, treatment, and community integration of people impacted by sexual abuse. The book discusses policy, practice, theory, and research in this area, with the authors reviewing, critiquing, synthesising, as well as building upon previous current research, theory, and policy.

Journalism Ethics in Eastern Europe Péter Bajomi-Lázár, Dalma Boldog, 2026-03-17 This textbook offers an overview of the current ethical challenges of public communication in general and of journalism in particular in Eastern Europe. It recalls the normative theories of media performance and describes the professionalisation and de-professionalisation of journalism. It explores the impacts of digitalisation and of platformisation on the news media and looks into the global and local reasons behind the inability of journalism to fully perform its democratic functions in Eastern Europe. It also offers a detailed account of the media systems and journalistic cultures of the region following the political transformations of 1989, 1991, and identifies some of the most controversial practices of journalism to date. Then, in search of answers to the current ethical challenges of public communication, it describes the prevailing notions of good and bad journalism, changing public expectations vis-à-vis journalists, the specific challenges encountered by investigative reporters, the effects of online fake news on the journalistic profession, the changing practices of political and corporate censorship, and the differences between smear and scandal. Finally, it argues that ethical public communication calls for more than just ethical journalism; media policy must also be ethically based and seek answers that provide all citizens with equal access to the means of public communication.
