Thinking through the Mothers Janet Beizer, 2011-03-15 If questions of subjectivity and identification are at stake in all biographical writing they are particularly trenchant for contemporary women biographers of women Often their efforts to exhume buried lives in hope of finding spiritual foremothers awaken maternal phantoms that must be embraced or confronted Do women writing in fact have any greater access to their own mothers lives than to the lives of other women whose stories have been swept away like dust in the debris of the past In Thinking through the Mothers Janet Beizer surveys modern women s biographies and contemplates alternatives to an approach based in lineage and the form of thought that emphasizes the line the path hierarchy unity resemblance reflection and the aesthetic mimesis that depends on these ideas Through close readings of memoirs and fictions about mothers Beizer explores how biographers of the women who came before rehearse and rewrite relationships to their own mothers biographically as they seek to appropriate the past in a hybrid genre she calls bio autobiography Thinking through the Mothers features the work of George Sand and Colette and spans such varied figures as Gustave Flaubert Julian Barnes Louise Colet Eunice Lipton Vladimir Nabokov Huguette Bouchardeau and Christa Wolf Beizer seeks an alternative to women s salvation biography or resurrection biography that might resist nostalgia be attentive to silence and reinvent the means to represent the lives of precursors without appropriating traditional models of genealogy

Thinking Through Translation with Metaphors James St. Andre, 2014-04-08 Thinking through Translation with Metaphors explores a wide range of metaphorical figures used to describe the translation process from Aristotle to the present Most practitioners and theorists of translation are familiar with a number of metaphors for translation such as the metaphor of the bridge following in another s footsteps performing a musical score changing clothes or painting a portrait yet relatively little attention has been paid to what these metaphorical models reveal about how we conceptualize translation Drawing on insights from recent developments in metaphor theory contributors to this volume reveal how central metaphorical language has been to translation studies at all periods of time and in various cultures Metaphors have played a key role in shaping the way in which we understand translation determining what facets of the translation process are deemed to be important and therefore merit study and aiding in the training of successive generations of translators and theorists While some of the papers focus mainly on past metaphorical representations others discuss recent shifts in both metaphor and translation theory while others still propose innovative metaphors in a bid to transform translation studies The volume also includes an annotated bibliography of works centrally concerned with metaphors of translation

In Their Parents' Voices Rita J. Simon, Rhonda M. Roorda, 2007-10-02 Rita J Simon and Rhonda M Roorda s In Their Own Voices Transracial Adoptees Tell Their Stories shared the experiences of twenty four black and biracial children who had been adopted into white families in the late 1960s and 70s The book has since become a standard resource for families and practitioners and now in this sequel we hear from the parents of these remarkable families and learn what it was like for them to raise children across racial and cultural lines These candid interviews shed light on the issues these parents encountered what part race played during thirty plus years of parenting what they learned about themselves and whether they would recommend transracial adoption to others Combining trenchant historical and political data with absorbing firsthand accounts Simon and Roorda once more bring an academic and human dimension to the literature on transracial adoption
