- *7. Describe the estimation of the allowance based on expected cash flows.
- *8. Compare the accounting procedures for cash and receivables under GAAP and IFRS.

CHAPTER REVIEW

1. (L.O. 1) Chapter 7 presents a detailed discussion of two of the primary liquid assets of a business enterprise, cash and receivables. Cash is the most liquid asset held by a business enterprise and possesses unique problems in its management and control. Receivables are composed of both accounts and notes receivables. Chapter coverage of accounts receivable places emphasis on trade receivables. In covering notes receivables, the chapter includes both short-term and long-term notes.

Nature of Cash

2. Cash consists of coin, currency, bank deposits, and negotiable instruments such as money orders, checks, and bank drafts. Cash that has been designated for some specific use, other than for payment of currently maturing obligations, is segregated from the general cash account. Cash equivalents are short-term, highly liquid investments and should generally only be recognized as current assets when they have original maturities of three months or less--otherwise they should be shown as non-current assets.

Restricted Cash

3. It is common practice for an enterprise to have an agreement with a bank concerning credit and borrowing arrangements. When such an agreement exists, the bank usually requires the enterprise to maintain a minimum cash balance on deposit. This minimum balance is known as a compensating balance. Compensating balances that result in legally restricted deposits must be separately classified in the balance sheet. The nature of the borrowing arrangement determines whether the compensating balance is classified as a current asset or a noncurrent asset.
