

(iv) various interconnected dimensions of development while facing phenomenon of sustainability. A major part of the population in Bangladesh is vulnerable by experiencing natural disasters, chronic poverty and other societal conflicts. So, an interaction is necessary among public, private, not-for-profit and household stakeholders for addressing these vulnerabilities. Each group has their own interest and pattern of behavior which creates different view point and conflicting actions. In tackling these issues, Mudacumura et al., (2006) suggest three approaches:

(a) A poorer orientation in the options of solving security problems should be addressed by increasing access to services and infrastructure.

(b) Growth-with-equity strategies which provides a favorable environment to reduce their economic vulnerability.

(c) Political rights and participation of the people helps them to take part in decision making process which helps to reduce poverty by articulating and recognizing it in the political arena.

The systems approach in sustainable development is a close match to the ecology of public administration, as it embraces the idea of interdependence of human life, equilibrium, organic systems, and stabilization. The ecology of public administration is closely related to the systems approach in sustainable development which should deal with interdependence of human life, equilibrium, organic systems, and stabilization in a country like Bangladesh. So, the government should consider and include the components of sustainable development in every policy planning.

Conclusion

From the above discussion it is clear that good public administration in all spheres of a country is necessary for sustainable development. Though present condition of the public administration of Bangladesh is not satisfactory, it will be good by adopting some strategies such as recruitment system should be free from illegal political interruption, no politicization allowed, eradication of corruption, improving policy implementation capacity, promoting local governance, ensuring participation and access of rural poor in justice, improving sectoral government. Some other important measure should be taken for sustainable and efficient administration such as efficient parliament and strong by strong leadership, building institutional capacity and strengthening parliamentary supervision. The ecology of public administration is closely related to the systems approach in sustainable development which should deal with interdependence of human life, equilibrium, organic systems, and stabilization in a country like Bangladesh. So, the government should consider and include the components of sustainable development in every policy planning.

Sustainable Development For Public Administration:

Sustainable Development for Public Administration John R. Bartle, Deniz Zeynep Leuenberger, 2014-12-18 This groundbreaking text focuses on the application of sustainability and sustainable development theories to public administration practice. It is designed to guide planning, resource management and outcomes measurement for future and current non-profit and public managers. The book introduces sustainable development and related theories, ties these theories to public administration practice and elaborates on applications to specific PA specializations including energy management, transportation, water waste management, urban development, wildlife conservation and higher education. It also includes a chapter specifically geared to outcome measurement of sustainability goals in public and non-profit agencies. Sustainable Development for Public Administration Caroline Covell, 2016 Reinventing the government was big in the early 1980s post-media presentation that echoed how inefficient the government has been. Ever since the government went through different reorganization processes through the application of different modern management theories endorsed by the politicians such as the Hawthorne theory, the Gantt Theory, Mintzberg Management Theory, Theory X and Y and the Agency Theory, all promise efficient government. However, Ghoshal argued that all these modern management theories are bad theories and they have destroyed the good management practice of a public institution. They were implemented as a trial and error: one fails, try another. As a result, the management system is destroyed. Its administrative system is broken. The organization is becoming dysfunctional and it causes a badly divided government. This damaged system makes it easy for theft, fraud, corruption, bribery, grafts, sabotage, espionage and all kinds of illegal practices. At the same time, the change causes the used to be a professional public institution to become an amateur corporation that is individually managed, personally ruled and undemocratic governance. This paper discusses the theoretical foundation of the bureaucracy and its analysis and once this theory is applied in the administrative system of government, it shows how this damage can be remedied theoretically and applicably.
