Shifting Paradigms in International Investment Law Steffen Hindelang, Markus Krajewski, 2016-01-21 International investment law is in transition Whereas the prevailing mindset has always been the protection of the economic interests of individual investors new developments in international investment law have brought about a paradigm shift There is now more than ever before an interest in a more inclusive transparent and public regime Shifting Paradigms in International Investment Law addresses these changes against the background of the UNCTAD framework to reform investment treaties The book analyses how the investment treaty regime has changed and how it ought to be changing to reconcile private property interests and the state's duty to regulate in the public interest. In doing so the volume tracks attempts in international investment law to recalibrate itself towards a more balanced less isolated and increasingly diversified regime. The individual chapters of this edited volume address the contents of investment agreements the system of dispute settlement the interrelation of investment agreements with other areas of public international law constitutional questions and new regional perspectives from Europe South Africa the Pacific Rim Region and Latin America. Together they provide an invaluable resource for scholars practitioners and policymakers. What does it take to make real change toward sustainability in international trade? IDH and its partners have spent the last 10 years learning the art of collaborative transformation accumulating tacit knowledge on what works and what doesn't to make change within the complexity of international trade. This book distills their insights presenting 5 key dimensions that are critical for stakeholders to attend to while working toward sustainability. The relational dimension involves building and convening different stakeholders into strong and effective coalitions. Through the discursive dimension coalitions must forge a framework for a common future out of diverse interests and concerns. Collaborative transformation also involves an institutional dimension as a variety of formal and informal structures lend critical support to the coalition's efforts. And those involved must continually learn by critically inquiring into their ongoing work together this is the reflective dimension. The fifth dimension concerns implementation change only happens when tangible shifts are happening at many different levels in the field along the value chain in business practices and in policy. To break down this complexity and to make it concrete IDH gives examples from their partnerships involving a wide range of industries from cotton to tea to cocoa. They show that collaborative transformations are not only possible they hold the key to our shared future.
