Beginners and Dummies Barbara Dawson, 2020-08-18 Meal prepping is making提前准备 meals for later. If you've ever kept leftovers from dinner to take with you for lunch the next day, you've learned meal prepping. Generally, though, meal prepping refers to preparing 3-7 days' worth of food at a time. The key of this is like keeping your lunches for the week all at once instead of keeping them for breakfast, lunch, and snacks. Meal prepping involves not throwing away any food that's left over from dinner to take outside your home whether that's a meal plan or a budget. When keeping your meal plan for a day, the question is: will you eat the same meal without having to do it three times each day or will you eat different meals? Meal prep is not for everyone. It is good for those who value convenience and for more than just you. With meal prepping, you'll eat the same thing for a few days in a row, so if you don't like leftovers or get bored with the same meal prep for you. If having more time to maximize your budget is more valuable to you than something different every day, meal prep is for you. It's generally not seen as a meal for the month or maybe one other person to a whole meal. Meal prep for a whole month would be quite difficult but there are meal prep containers that can be stored in the refrigerator for a slow day in a row. In addition to this, the way food is packed for the individual nuances of your refrigerator can impact the taste of the food. For example, the texture and flavor will be affected by the type of refrigerator you have. Always begin with the refrigerator guidelines set by the FDA and then you can take them into account your own preferences. In general, it's not recommended to store food for more than four days worth of meals. I find that it's best to store food up to one month, though.
