Wolfram,1997 This paper considers the bidding behavior of participants in the daily auction to supply electricity in England and Wales Every day owners of generating capacity submit bids reflecting a price for power from their plants The price bid by the last plant used to meet electricity needs in a given time period is the price paid for capacity from all plants Theoretical work on uniform price multi unit auctions suggests that bidders selling more than one unit of a good have an incentive to increase the prices they bid at high quantities If a bid sets the equilibrium price the bidder receives a higher price for that unit as well as for all inframarginal units I find evidence of strategic bid increases First plants that are likely to be used after a number of other plants are already operating bid more Second the larger supplier submits higher bids all else equal Lastly there is some evidence that bids for given plants are higher when the suppliers have more available capacity Commerce Business Daily, 1999-07 Annual Directory of Pipelines, 1957 Intellectual Capital and the Firm Lynne G. Zucker, Michael R. Darby, Jeff Armstrong, 1994 We examine the effects of university based star scientists on three measures of performance for California biotechnology enterprises the number of products in development the number of products on the market and changes in employment The star concept which Zucker Darby and Brewer 1994 demonstrated was important for birth of U S biotechnology enterprises also predicts geographically localized knowledge spillovers at least for products in development However when we break down university stars into those who have collaborated on publications with scientists affiliated with the firm and all other university stars there is a strong positive effect of the linked stars on all three firm performance measures and little or no evidence of an effect from the other university stars We develop a new hypothesis of geographically localized effects of university research which is consistent with market exchange Geographically localized effects occur for scientific discoveries characterized by natural excludability those which can be learned only by working with discoverers or others who have received the knowledge through working together in the laboratory Natural excludability results in intellectual capital a transitory form of human capital embodied in particular scientists whose services must be employed in order to practice the discovery Contractual and or ownership relationships occur between firms and the university scientists with intellectual capital and importantly determine firm productivity and growth
