Biodiversity and Ecosystem Functions Clement A. Tisdell, 2015-10-30 The stock of the world's biological diversity and the state of its ecosystems are major determinants of the availability of commodities both essential and desirable for human life. This leading edge study provides an overarching and balanced approach to the economics of biological conservation considering man made and natural components and their interdependence. Recognising the deficiencies of many contemporary studies which focus almost entirely on natural capital Clement Tisdell utilizes the concept of heritage biological capital including germplasm as part of his analysis of changes in the stock of biological capital. This comprehensive synthesis casts doubt upon some propositions and policies for resource conservation recommended by eminent ecologists in areas such as GM crops and livestock husbandry as well as agroecosystems and the concept of sustainable agricultural intensification. The propositions presented are lent strength by the author's decision to relate his analysis to pertinent contemporary institutional developments and scientific advances. The broad scope and rational scepticism with which this book has been compiled make it an ideal read for economists interested in ecological and environmental economics natural scientists with an interest in biodiversity conservation and higher level policy makers in ecological and environmental fields.

Science John Feather, Rodney Paul Sturges, 2003 The International Encyclopedia of Information and Library Science was published to widespread acclaim in 1996 and has become the major reference work in the field. This eagerly awaited new edition has been fully revised and updated to take full account of the many and radical changes which have taken place since the Encyclopedia was originally conceived. With nearly 600 entries written by a global team of over 150 contributors the subject matter ranges from mobile library services provided by camel and donkey transport to search engines, portals and the World Wide Web. The new edition retains the successful structure of the first with an alphabetical organization providing the basic framework of a coherent collection of connected entries. Conceptual entries explore and explicate all the major issues, theories and activities in information and library science such as the economics of information and information management. A wholly new entry on information systems and enhanced entries on the information professions and the information society are key features of this new edition. Topical entries deal with more specific subjects such as collections management and information services for ethnic minorities. New or completely revised entries include a group of entries on information law and a collection of entries on the Internet and the World Wide Web.
