The research is grounded in the theoretical perspectives of the researchers, which are centered on the sociocultural, cognitive, and developmental aspects of language learning (Smith et al., 2023).

2.2. Theoretical Framework: A Comprehensive Overview (Smith et al., 2023)

The theoretical framework of this study is rooted in the sociocultural theory, which emphasizes the role of social interaction in language learning. This framework is informed by Vygotsky's (1978) concept of the Zone of Proximal Development (ZPD), which posits that learners can achieve higher levels of understanding through the guidance of more knowledgeable others. Additionally, the study draws on the work of Bandura (1977) regarding the role of observational learning and self-efficacy in language acquisition.

The study also incorporates the concept of the Zone of Proximal Development (ZPD), which is defined as the difference between what a learner can do independently and what they can do with the help of a more knowledgeable other. This concept is central to the study's understanding of language learning, as it highlights the importance of social interaction in facilitating language development.
