Foundations for Teaching Technical Communication Katherine Staples, Cezar M. Ornatowski, 1997-12-31 This is designed to be a seminal textbook for researchers and teachers of scientific and technical communication It draws together contributions from scholars in the field covering the three broad themes of theory practice and program design while focusing on topics of contemporary concern These include insights into the relevance of cognitive psychology for technical communication ethics and multicultural issues impact of new technologies visual communication design of teaching and research programmes and quality and evaluation

Expectations George D. Gopen, 2004 This instructor resource approaches the teaching of writing by focusing on readers expectations explaining the perceptive patterns that readers follow in their interpretive process Examining reader expectations this text argues that the structural location of a word is often more important than word choice in a reader's interpretation of a piece of writing Expectations shows how readers gather contextual clues based not on what specific words mean but on where those words appear in the structure of a sentence or paragraph It then discusses how to bring these intuitive processes to conscious thought allowing students to understand and control how readers perceive their writing

Civil-Military Interaction during Disaster Response

Emily M. Chapman, 2025-03-04 This book presents a model to help enhance civil military interaction in disaster response settings for the benefit of affected communities and the host nation. Militaries are increasingly deploying to assist or are present in areas impacted by natural hazards. Drawing on the author's own operational experience and recent case studies of natural hazard responses, the book contributes a practical and accessible approach to civil military interaction that enables actors to negotiate a relationship where there is shared purpose. It establishes a theoretical foundation for civil military interaction which is then used to describe effective interaction as a process of coordination that consists of sequential and necessary conditions that contribute to humanitarian outcomes and operational effectiveness. The book is novel because it includes the voices of affected communities and it synthesizes factors that influence civil military interaction across case studies to argue that where context allows, civilian and military actors should focus on building a purposeful relationship that places affected communities and local leadership at the forefront of responses. Using this book, practitioners will be supported to establish relationships that contribute to their respective purposes, taking into consideration the consequences of their actions on others. This book will be of much interest to students of civil military relations, civil military coordination, disaster responses, and International Relations in general.
