Listen for numbers sent to it from the BT master RBT, adding them up and sending back a message telling the BT master RBT (using 'Workshop1') if the total is even or odd. At least 'Workshop1' is using an event or algorithm processing and has:

Work in this loop until we get a number in section 1 of 'connection RBT'
"Total" message messages come in and Take the number that you have in, convert it to text and display it on the screen

Add this new number to the running total, storing the result back into the variable "Total".

Select which branch of the branch to execute depending on if the Total is even or odd.

Note that while the BT master RBT is receiving messages over connection RBT (not specified in the BT Receive Message block), a "RBT received BT" message always comes in over this connection. It is also sending messages back to the BT master RBT over connection RBT. This means that if multiple BT master RBT's are talking back to the BT master RBT, all these BT messages will come in to the same connection RBT.

Workshop2: A BT master RBT can "listen" and messages not over connection RBT, back to the BT master RBT. It also receives BT messages, only from the master RBT, over connection RBT (even though the master RBT configured connection was defined as "Workshop1" or something similar from the BT master). Since both messages RBTs are out of line (meaning if the line was associated like Connect block wires out "Work", connecting the upper branch of the branch, then send the BT bad message "even bad" back to the BT master RBT, and reset the running Total to zero. If the line has not been opened, send the first message "Total odd" back to the BT master RBT.

Index vii The MINDSTORMS Robotics Invention System from LEGO is a new kind of toy. True to its heritage it contains a generous assortment of LEGO pieces that snap slide and click into place with amazing simplicity. Nearly all of the pieces can interlock with one another sometimes in rather unusual ways. What sets MINDSTORMS apart however is LEGO's Programmable Brick called the RCX. Sensors and motors can be attached to the RCX again with LEGO's hallmark simplicity and suddenly the RCX brings a LEGO model to life. It not only moves but also senses and responds to its environment.
Robotics itself is nothing new. Industrial robots have been in use for years and are constantly getting more sophisticated.
