

Egan's Skilled Helper Model

This is a structured way of conducting an interviewing process that takes into account being strategic and intentional in ways to manage and meet professional responsibilities and develop personal responsibility. It is designed to be used either before or after students' help-seeking, and has been extensively used by teachers.

This model has three dimensions that are summarised as:

- 1. Knowledge – what is going on?
- 2. Qualitative – What are the next steps?
- 3. How well – how good is going?

Stage 1: Assessment

This stage is designed to assess someone's experience of what is happening (they may not know what is going on) in a particular context, situation or problem. This involves:

- 1. ask and be asked – problem/issue (challenge, task, context, etc.)
 - 2. active listening – listening for what is being said and what goes on when it isn't being said
 - 3. summarise what is going on – it is what the student has chosen to bring up and what all relevant background issues are relevant to what is occurring. This includes a brief, general description of the problem, the student's view of the problem
 - 4. summarise what is happening – it is what the student says about the situation/issue that has been said
 - 5. listening – what is there a clear statement about the current situation as the student is describing? Are there feelings – how does the student feel about the situation? Are there particular problems and concerns about the situation?
 - 6. good timing – good questions are asked and answered in a way that the student is happy to answer. They are asked in a way that the student is likely to answer them.
- This stage is a key part of the model. It is designed to be used in a way that the student is able to describe the situation and what is going on. It is designed to be used in a way that the student is able to describe the situation and what is going on. It is designed to be used in a way that the student is able to describe the situation and what is going on.

Stage 2: Planning

This stage involves developing a plan for the student to follow. It is designed to be used in a way that the student is able to describe the situation and what is going on. It is designed to be used in a way that the student is able to describe the situation and what is going on.

- 1. active listening – what is the student's view of the situation?
- 2. active listening – what is the student's view of the situation?
- 3. active listening – what is the student's view of the situation?
- 4. active listening – what is the student's view of the situation?
- 5. active listening – what is the student's view of the situation?
