Strategy Maps Converting Intangible Assets Into Tangible Outcomes , Use Strategy Maps to Communicate Your Strategy David P. Norton,1999 The formulation of strategy will always be an art but the description of strategy should not Strategy maps provide a disciplined way of linking hypotheses about your company s performance to near term objectives

The Strategy Map for General Electric Medical Systems, 2002 Nadine Pahl, 2009-04 Research Paper undergraduate from the year 2008 in the subject Business economics Business Management Corporate Governance grade 1 3 University of Applied Sciences Berlin Master of Business Administration course Strategic Management language English abstract If you take the words of a former General Electrics GE employee to define strategy William E Rothschild said What do you want to achieve or avoid The answers to this question are objectives How will you go about achieving your desired results The answer to this you can call strategy This statement not only highlights the need for strategy but also the need to bring strategy to fruition Companies should not only devise strategy but also successfully clarify and execute their strategies This means that a company has to be able to measure its strategic success Unfortunately company strategy is not always transparent or understood in the same way by a company s key players Sun Tzu a Chinese military strategist who wrote the military treatise The Art of War praised this aspect for strategies in war as follows All men can see these tactics whereby I conquer but what none can see is the strategy out of which victory is evolved The Strategy Map created by Kaplan and Norton is to facilitate corporate strategy development and execution providing a missing link between strategy formulation and strategy implementation by identifying the key internal processes that drive strategic success and by aligning investment in people technology and organizational capital for the greatest impact The first part of the assignment describes in detail the theoretical framework of Strategy Maps The second part uses the theory to describe and visualize the Strategy Map of General Electric Medical Systems GEMS the world s leading manufacturer of diagnostic imaging equipment This practical approach is based on the publication of Tarun Khanna about GEMS in the Harvard Business School Press in

Strategy Maps Rainer Lueg, 2015 The Balanced Scorecard BSC is supposed to translate strategy into action Strategy Maps support this by showing cause and effect chains But what does this mean for strategy execution in practice To achieve better BSC implementations I uncover pitfalls and name the remedies I summarize the most important findings from initially over 1 000 studies that have dealt with the Balanced Scorecard from 1992 to 2012 BSC implementations that use a sophisticated Strategy Map appear to be successful Strategy Maps foster a better understanding of the BSC among employees create greater commitment and less resistance and are superior to the BSC itself in communicating how to achieve strategic goals Also Strategy Maps facilitate managers evaluation of the relevant environment Nevertheless the common measure bias is a usual pitfall top managers have a tendency to use their own strategic targets as a yardstick for lower level employees This paper helps managers understand the most recent developments on Strategy Maps In particular I highlight that causalities do not exist in organizations in the same way as there are laws in physics Instead organizations need to customize their BSC to their way of doing business

How are Strategy Maps Linked to Strategic and Organizational Change? A Review of the Empirical Literature on the

Balanced Scorecard Rainer Lueg, Pernille Julner, 2015 Proponents of the Balanced Scorecard BSC emphasize that the BSC translates strategy into action but that Strategy Maps are a crucial mean to sustainable change This literature review investigates how Strategy Maps are linked to strategic and organizational change We aim at a better understanding of BSC implementations gaps in practice as well as remedies Built upon the theoretical framework of Kaplan and Norton we conduct a systematic literature review of initially 332 empirical studies between 1992 and 2013 We find that only 15 studies have dealt with the topic of Strategy Maps Yet BSC implementations that actually use Strategy Maps appear to be rather successful Strategy Maps induce sustainable change foster a better understanding of the BSC facilitate evaluations of the external environment create greater commitment lower resistance and are superior to a stand alone BSC in communicating strategy Nevertheless we identify the common measure bias as a usual pitfall that leads to inappropriate evaluations of lower level actors We assert that BSC implementations need a Strategy Map to be successful We also highlight that there has been only little research on the topic and that present findings might be inconclusive due to the confined range of methodology single organization case studies

The Semantic Content of Strategy Maps Anastássios Perdicoúlís, 2012 Strategy maps present the action contained in a strategy accompanied by other essential elements and the associations between them This semantic content deserves to be known because it determines how informative and hence useful a strategy map is This article presents the semantic content of strategy maps created by a the successful Kaplan Norton K N technique and b the newer descriptive causal diagram DCD technique
