

DRONE

The unassuming large drone serves two critically important roles for the Swarm. Originally, very evolution accumulated DNA from the genetic waste of Eldarons to create an efficient, durable worker for the job of gathering resources for the colony. But much like the large larvae, the drone had evolved that were so close and adaptable that the drone became the genetic stem—the biological starting point—for all very colony structures.

A drone can actually serve the Swarm's materialistic compulsion to expand by sacrificing its own body to the mutation of new colony organs—what we call "buildings." Genes that originate of a remarkably strong and resilient bonding substance (labeled "B-3001" by human scientists) forms the structural bulk of all drone mutations. The drone's finely webbed scutellum membrane creates a malleable template that frames each structure as it quickly mutates into final form.
