Houen, 2020-02-06 This book considers how affect the experience of feeling or emotion has developed as a critical concept within literary studies in different periods and through a range of approaches Stretching from the classical to the contemporary the first section of the book Origins considers the importance of particular areas of philosophy theory and criticism that have been important for conceptualizing affect and its relation to literature Includes ancient Greek and Roman philosophy eighteenth century aesthetics Marxist theory psychoanalysis queer theory and postcolonial theory The chapters of the second section Developments correspond to those of the previous section and build on their insights through readings of particular texts The final Applications section is focused on contemporary and future lines of enquiry and revolves around a particular set of concerns media and communications capitalism and an environment of affective relations that extend to ecology social crisis and war Atopia Sandra Simonds, 2019-11-05 Atopia grapples with the political climate of the United States manifested through our everyday lives Sandra Simonds charts the formations and deformations of the social and political through the observations of the poem's speakers interspersed with the language of social media news reports political speech and the dialogue of friends children strangers and politicians The Los Angeles Review of Books characterized Simonds's work as robust energetic fanciful even baroque and a necessary counterforce to the structures of gender power and labor that impinge upon contemporary life These poems reflect on what it means to be human what it means to build communities within a political structure it also opposes Tallahassee Tallahassee Tallahassee Your mist today is incredible as it settles on this rose garden When the largest rose shook off its dew and looked at me like a cartoon I smiled back and promised not to break his neck And here we are together again walking in a park that honors dead children A tree planted for each child on such a mild day in December And how the dead children stream through me scrolls of them Lily Rose Bobby Kierkegaard says anyone who follows through on an idea becomes unpopular And also that a person needs a system otherwise you become mere personality He must not have known very many poets so prone to tyrannical shifts in mood

Change in the weather is equal to don't let me go crazy In the car on the way to school Charlotte says I like to be gentle with nature because I like nature But my mind wouldn't rest system less as I drive through dread Lily Rose Bobby You're dead you're dead

Further Problems with Pleasure Sandra Simonds, 2017 If Coleridge Plath Ovid and Celan started a love commune where they built a manifesto Molotov cocktail out of the pastoral eros blank verse and kitsch it would be this book A true original thrilling in her brash complex feminism and virtuosic in sound and line Simonds writes of the lives and desires trod upon by late capitalism and poetry Carmen Gimenez Smith 2015 Akron Poetry Prize judge

Triptychs Sandra Simonds, 2022 Sandra Simonds's Triptychs is a brilliant intersection of poetic form and the passage of time Crafted initially in strips handwritten on rolls of receipt paper obtained at a dollar store then assembled into three textual columns that sit side by side on the page these triptychs are joined or disjoined in several ways through diction through the special relation of words evoking intimacy touch or in contrast alienation and through thematic similarities or dissimilarities As a result the poems energize the confines of this writing space as they invite readers to recall painterly constructions and news headlines wherein each pillar is in conversation with another sequentially and simultaneously With the same lyric attention found in all of Simonds's poetry the poems here mark an innovative shift in poetics that is both polyvocal and singular
