AMID SHOCK, A RUSH TO HELP STRANGERS

By David Abel

The runner's eyes stared vacantly into the sky. The runner had been bounding in, bounding with relief. On both sides of Boylston Street, hundreds of spectators still had parked the area, many cheering with banners waving for the later finishers waiting in scores of them every minute. An elderly volunteer greeting runners kept repeating this mantra: "You're all winners."

When the first boom shattered the bliss and the haze of white smoke wafted over the finish line, I could see in the eyes of the woman what had happened. She wasn't screaming. She wasn't moving. Her eyes appeared lifeless as she lay beside the metal barriers on the sidewalk, where dozens of people were sprawled on the concrete, their limbs mangled, blood and broken glass everywhere.

A MOTHER REELS AS 2 SONS LOSE LEGS

By Patricia Wen
GLOBE STAFF

Liz Norden, a mother of five, had just finished loading groceries into her Walkman bag Monday afternoon when her cellphone rang. "Ma, I'm hurt real bad," said her 31-year-old son. She was in an ambulance, he told her, being rushed to Beth Israel Deaconess Medical Center.

er to watch a friend run in the Boston Marathon. On the phone, her son said his legs were badly burned in an explosion. His brother had been hurt too, but he didn't know where he was.

Within the next two hours, another phone call and a packed drive into Boston, Norden joined together the horrific truth that her two sons had lost their legs. "I was her second boy, who had gone with his older brother."

3 killed, 130 hurt by bombs at finish line; area locked down

Two bomb blasts, 13 seconds apart, rocked the finish line of the 117th running of the Boston Marathon Monday, killing at least three people, including an 8-year-old Dorchester boy, wounding more than 130, and leaving the sidewalk of Boylston Street covered in blood.

Medical professionals on hand to care for blisters and sore knees in Copley Square suddenly found themselves treating life-threatening lacerations and lost limbs, as a high holiday in Boston, Patriots Day, turned into an epic tragedy. Emergency workers rushed to the scene, despite the very real possibility of more blasts.

The explosions blew out windows, sent plumes of smoke into the sky, and left victims piled on each other in a scene far more reminiscent of a battlefield than a celebrated day in Boston's Back Bay. The blasts occurred at 2:30 p.m., several hours after the elite runners had finished the race.

About 30 people were transferred to hospitals under a Code Red, meaning life-threatening injuries, which may point to a rising death toll, said a law enforcement official.

Washington, D.C., and around the nation, as the country mourned with Boston.

"We will find out who did this, we'll find out why they did this," pledged President Obama, in remarks from the White House. "Any responsible individuals, any responsible groups will feel the full weight of justice."

The grief resonated sharply in Dorchester, where residents gathered Monday night at Tonic Restaurant in memory of 8-year-old Martin Richard, who was killed in the attack, and his mother and sister, who suffered grievous injuries. Martin's father, Bill, is a community leader in the Ashmont section of Dorchester. A third child was reportedly wounded.

"They are beloved by this community," said City Councilor at Large Joanna Novak, who was among the mourners. "They contribute in many ways. That's why you see this outpouring. It's normal, it's tragic."

A massive investigation was underway Monday night over the direction of the FBI, as much of the Back Bay was locked down to protect the sprawling crime scene. Last night, officials called the investigation "very active and fast." Authorities were questioning witnesses, said a police official.

The Deep Secrets Of The Boston Marathon Bombings:

Washington's Dark Secret John Maszka, 2018-10-01 As a scholar of terrorism John Maszka has examined how politics the media and the War on Terror play off one another His most startling claim is that the War on Terror is a war for natural resources and that terrorism has little to do with it Once the military became mechanized oil quickly became the most sought after commodity on the planet and the race for energy was eventually framed as a matter of national security Ironically Maszka argues the true threats to national security are the massive oil conglomerates themselves Maszka delves into the repercussions of a government that capitalizes on an us versus them mentality such as the demonizing of an entire religion sensationalizing radical violent attacks and loosely applying the word terrorism Because the United States current approach to terrorism has led to the politicization and abuse of the term Maszka suggests a need for a standardized definition of terrorism Currently too many acts of violence can be labeled terrorism resulting in state and nonstate actors labeling their enemies as terrorists yet claiming their own acts of violence as legitimate and retributive Maszka argues that much of the violence labeled as terrorism today is not terrorism at all In an ambitious attempt to connect seemingly unrelated events in politics and the media Maszka offers an unflinching portrayal of the hypocrisy underlying our foreign policy Salem
