Mixed Signals Mary Lashno,2010 Mary Lashno an occupational therapist at the Kennedy Krieger Institute in Baltimore

Maryland shares her extensive experience working with children who don't process sensory information properly. Her new book educates parents about why some children's sensory systems experience over or under stimulation and what can be done to treat the condition so children can learn and be a part of daily activities. This book also helps parents to recognise when behaviour is a characteristic of another condition such as autism or Down syndrome and when it's due to poor sensory processing. With the help of case studies the author provides many examples of how children with poor sensory processing react differently to sensory input: staring into lights, avoiding face washing or brushing teeth, seeming overly clumsy than children with normal sensory systems. Parents learn how to interpret behaviours and detect when a child may be over stimulated or under stimulated. A discussion of strategies and interventions explains how therapists and families can work with children to help develop an individualised sensory diet to calm or awaken sensory receptors so kids can function better and begin to tolerate a wider range of sensory information. Topics covered include Terminology of sensory processing, Normal vs abnormal sensory processing, Evaluating your child's sensory system, Assessment tools, Sensory Integration Therapy what it is and how it works, Treatment approaches, Establishing and managing your child's sensory diet. This guide is useful to families of children with a variety of diagnoses, deficits and skills. You'll be better able to understand your child's sometimes perplexing behaviour as well as be a part of the therapeutic process in conjunction with trained professionals. Buy a copy to share with a teacher, coach or therapist so everyone can get involved.

Brain-Body Parenting Mona

Delahooke, 2022-03-15 NATIONAL BESTSELLER From a leading child psychologist comes this groundbreaking new understanding of children's behavior offering insight and strategies to support both parents and children. Nominated for Malcolm Gladwell, Susan Cain, Adam Grant and Daniel H. Pink's Next Big Idea Club. Over her decades as a clinical psychologist, Dr. Mona Delahooke has routinely counseled distraught parents who struggle to manage their children's challenging, sometimes oppositional behaviors. These families are understandably focused on correcting or improving a child's lack of compliance, emotional outbursts, tantrums and other out of control behavior. But as she has shared with these families, a perspective shift is needed. Behavior, no matter how challenging, is not the problem but a symptom, a clue about what is happening in a child's unique physiologic makeup. In Brain Body Parenting, Dr. Delahooke offers a radical new approach to parenting based on her clinical experience as well as the most recent research in neuroscience and child psychology. Instead of a top-down approach to behavior that focuses on the thinking brain, she calls for a bottom-up approach that considers the essential role of the entire nervous system which produces children's feelings and behaviors. When we begin to understand the biology beneath the behavior, suggests Dr. Delahooke, we give our children the resources they need to grow and thrive and we give ourselves the gift of a happier, more connected relationship with them. Brain Body Parenting empowers parents with tools to help their children develop self-regulation skills while also encouraging parental self-care which is crucial for parents to have the capacity to provide the essential co-regulation children need. When parents shift from trying to secure compliance to supporting connection and balance in the body and mind they unlock a deeper understanding of their child encouraging calmer behavior more harmonious family dynamics and increased resilience      The Complete Mental Health Directory Richard Gottlieb,2006-03 Provides comprehensive coverage of 27 specific mental health disorders from adjustment disorders to tic disorders including a separate section devoted to pediatric and adolescent issues as well as support systems and other resources      The Complete Mental Health Directory ,2004      Food and Your Child Time-Life Books,1988 or scream when it's time to get dressed. These aren't just behaviors; they're sensory messages. The Sensory Compass Manual offers families a compassionate, research-supported guide to understanding the unique sensory experiences of children with autism, ADHD, and related differences. This book helps you decode confusing or challenging behaviors not as defiance, anxiety, or OCD, but as signals of how your child's nervous system is coping with the world. In Part 1 of this three-part series, you'll learn how the eight sensory systems, including interoception and proprioception, shape your child's behavior. The difference between scripting and compulsions. Why self-injury, elopement, and thought loops may be sensory regulation strategies. How to create sensory-safe routines and calming environments at home. The role of occupational therapy in recognizing sensory-based needs. Why labeling behavior without a sensory lens leads to misdiagnosis and how to avoid it. How to reframe meltdowns, repetitive speech, and thought fixations as communication. This manual doesn't offer quick fixes; it offers a new language. It's filled with relatable examples, home-based strategies, and gentle science to help you see your child through a different lens: one of connection, compassion, and curiosity. You are your child's compass. This book will help you find true north. Part 2, scheduled for release in August 2025, will explore the Polyvagal Theory, trauma, and sensory regulation, and how to build full sensory profiles to support IEPs, home routines, and emotional growth.
