

Lesson Outline*LESSON 2*Understanding Inheritance*A. What controls traits?

- Results each cell in a nucleus that contains the same DNA structure, called a chromosome.
- Chromosomes are parts of chromosomes, and each cell has the same type of chromosomes. These traits are called genes.
- A trait gene is an allele that is a chromosome that has genetic information for one trait.
- The different forms of a gene are called alleles.
- Genetics refers to how a trait appears, or is expressed, in the body's phenotype.
- The two alleles that control the phenotype of a trait are called the trait's genotype.
- In general, dominant factors represent dominant alleles, and recessive factors represent recessive alleles.
- If two alleles of a gene are the same, the genotype is homozygous.
- If two alleles of a gene are different, the genotype is heterozygous.

B. Modeling Inheritance

- For a trait to be passed on through each cell, the chance of getting a certain combination when two parents have different traits needs to be 50% for each trait.
- A trait P assortant requires a model that is used to predict possible genotypes and phenotypes of offspring.
- For a trait of P assortant requires, you need to know the genotypes of both parents.
- If you want to know numbers of offspring, there is a particular curve, the overall ratio will be closer to the ratio predicted by a P assortant.
- A trait pedigree is a diagram that shows phenotypes of genetically related family members. It also gives clues about their genotypes.
