1. What is the purpose of the study?
The purpose of this study is to evaluate the effectiveness of a new treatment for depression. The treatment is called "Cognitive Behavioral Therapy" (CBT) and it has been shown to be effective in previous studies. The study will compare CBT to a placebo treatment (a dummy treatment) to see if CBT is more effective. The study will also look at how long the effects of CBT last.

2. Who can participate in the study?
The study is open to adults aged 18 to 65 who are experiencing symptoms of depression. Participants must be able to speak English and understand the study procedures. They must also be willing to commit to 12 weekly sessions of CBT or the placebo treatment.

3. What are the requirements for participation?
Participants will be required to attend all 12 sessions of the study. They will also be asked to complete a series of questionnaires at the beginning and end of the study to measure their symptoms of depression. Participants will also be asked to keep a diary of their symptoms and treatment progress.

4. What are the potential risks and benefits of participation?
The potential risks of participation are minimal. Participants will be asked to attend weekly sessions, which may be time-consuming. There is also a small risk of side effects from the placebo treatment, although this is rare. The potential benefits of participation are significant. Participants will receive free treatment for depression and will have the opportunity to contribute to scientific research. Participants will also receive compensation for their time and effort.

5. What are the costs of participation?
There are no costs associated with participation in this study. Participants will receive free treatment and compensation for their time and effort.

6. What are the next steps for participation?
If you are interested in participating in this study, please contact the study coordinator at [phone number] or [email address]. The coordinator will provide you with more information about the study and answer any questions you may have.
