Abstract

These results suggest that the use of a single, standard, and simple questionnaire is a feasible and effective method for gathering information on the prevalence of mental health problems in a community. The use of a single questionnaire also has the advantage of being cost-effective, as it allows for the collection of a large amount of data at a relatively low cost. The use of a single questionnaire also allows for the collection of data on a wide range of mental health problems, including depression, anxiety, and substance use. The use of a single questionnaire also allows for the collection of data on the prevalence of mental health problems in a community, which is a key goal of the study.
