Mobility Injustice by Design Ole B. Jensen,2026-01-23 Mobility Injustice by Design examines the social exclusion of vulnerable people in urban spaces revealing how millions of citizens have their right to roam curbed by design and planning decisions made either intentionally to facilitate immobility or social exclusion or because of a lack of awareness of the aggregated consequences Ole B Jensen s insightful volume offers a theoretically informed framework allowing us to see mobility injustices more clearly consider how new knowledge can mobilize design ethics and think about how mobility justice can be brought about It challenges us to reassess how choices of materials design of spaces and implementation of technologies afford or hinder particular mobilities It explores a way of thinking about mobility and injustice that recognizes that everyone is assisted in their mobility practices and that human capacity for acting in the world is mediated by spaces things artifacts and technologies It examines not only the centrality of design but also the possibility that design may be working counter to the widespread cultural belief that design is in the service of the good It locates thinking about mobility injustice between affect experiences and sensations on the one hand and reason principles and formal rules on the other Focusing on three realms of practice it reveals the ways in which the design of cities and urban spaces accommodates the needs of people living as unhoused disabled and aged and how these groups experience mobility injustice Crucially it provides insight into the potential to move toward a future more mobility just society on a local national and global scale in light of warfare environmental and migration crises Mobility Injustice by Design informs the future agenda of both critical mobilities research and the design fields and reflects on the potential for those in the arts and design to provoke public engagement in these timely issues It is essential reading for all those concerned with the study and practice of mobilities theory urban sociology urban planning and design architecture urban geography disability studies and gerontology
