Urban Music Education Kate Fitzpatrick-Harnish, 2015 The prevailing discourse surrounding urban music education suggests the deficit laden notion that urban school settings are less than rather than different than their counterparts Through the lens of contextually specific teaching this book provides a counternarrative on urban music education that encourages urban music teachers to focus on the strengths of their students as their primary resource Through a combination of research based strategies and practical suggestions from the author's own experience teaching music in urban settings the book highlights important issues for teachers to consider such as culturally relevant pedagogy the opportunity gap race ethnicity socioeconomic status musical content curricular change music program development student motivation and strategies for finding inspiration and support Throughout the book the stories of five highly successful urban music teachers are highlighted providing practical real world advice for music teachers across the domains of general choral band and string music teaching Recognizing that the term urban can encompass a wide variety of different school and community settings this book challenges all teachers who work in under served and under resourced settings to take a critical look at their own music classroom and work to tailor their pedagogy to meet the particular needs of their students

Challenges of Conflicting School Reforms Mark Berends, 2002 A decade ago New American Schools NAS launched an ambitious effort for whole school reform to address the perceived lagging achievement of American students and the lackluster school reform attempts that have produced so few meaningful changes As a private nonprofit organization NAS set out to help schools and districts significantly raise the achievement of large numbers of students by offering whole school designs and design based assistance during the implementation process NAS is currently in the scale up phase of its effort and its designs are being widely diffused to schools across the nation During the 1997_1998 and 1998_1999 school years RAND assessed the effects of NAS designs on classroom practice and student achievement in a sample of schools in a high poverty district RAND found that high poverty schools often have fragmented and conflicting environments with difficult and changing political currents and entrenched unions Teachers in high poverty schools tend to face new accountability systems and fluctuating reform agendas These teachers generally lack sufficient time for implementing reform efforts often becoming demoralized and losing their enthusiasm for the difficult task of improving student performance under difficult conditions RAND concluded that high stakes tests may motivate schools to increase performance and to seek out new curricula and instructional strategies associated with comprehensive school reforms. However, those same tests may provide disincentives to adopt richer, more in-depth curricula that can succeed in improving the learning opportunities of all students, particularly those in high-poverty settings. The Study of Stanford and the Schools, 1987. Classroom Management Paul Burden, 2006-01-06. With this innovative book, teachers and prospective teachers will gain the skills needed to create a positive classroom community. It presents fundamental principles of classroom management and discipline along with ways to involve students in the creation of their learning environment. The new third edition reflects a practical, realistic view of teaching with the content being organized in a logical, sequential order. Standards are used to guide the development of new teachers, help inservice teachers improve their performance, and assess both teacher preparation and teacher performance. The Development of Achievement Beliefs and Behaviors During Early Adolescence Allison Murphy Ryan, 1998. Colorado Journal of Educational Research, 1970. California Law Review, 1996.

Intercultural Student Teaching Kenneth Cushner, Sharon Brennan, 2007. In response to the changing global climate and the growing recognition of the professional associations in the teacher education community, universities around the country are beginning to recognize the need to add a global dimension to their education programs. One way to prepare teachers to address the challenges associated with teaching children in a global age is through carefully structured international and intercultural field experiences where candidates are immersed in another culture. Since student teaching requires candidates to show they can translate theory into practice over a sustained period of time, it is ideally suited for strengthening candidates' intercultural understanding. Intercultural Student Teaching demonstrates examples of these successful programs and provides documented experience from professionals currently engaged in intercultural teaching practice. Readers will learn from the contributors' experiences through carefully crafted chapters that focus on major elements of program implementation and delivery. The contributors report how they have created, organized, and maintained programs in their purview and address program features such as selection, orientation, and supervision of participating candidates, interaction with host families and communities, and strategies for enhancing understanding of global and domestic diversity. Resources in Education, 1997. Comprehensive Multicultural Education Christine I. Bennett, 2007. This text provides preservice teachers the historical background, basic terminology, and social science concepts of multicultural education to help them as they enter the field. On Board, 2002.
